OSTEOPATHY

is a Scientific Method of Healing

by skillful manipulation of the human body, based upon a thorough knowledge of anatomy and physiology. It regards the human system as capable of keeping itself in perfect health when properly aided. It recognizes (1) that the source of health is within us, not without; (2) that all bodily disorders are the result of mechanical obstruction to the free circulation of the vital fluids and forces of the body; and (3) that a diseased body needs something done to it, not something put into it. Its keynote is adjustment.

It is the work of a master mechanic upon the most complicated of machines.

It is the office of the Osteopath not to supply but to direct the force of natural law; not to put drugs into the body, but to control the remedial agents which are already within it.

Osteopathy treats all diseases—acute and chronic.

Osteopathic cures are permanent because they are the result of perfect adjustment, thereby restoring normal nerve force and circulation to all parts of the body.
